CASE NO. 00-6311-CR-HUCK
MAGISTRATE JUDGE BROWN

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

CLARENCE LARK, et al.,

Defendant.

UNITED STATES' MEMORANDUM OF LAW
ON PROPERTY SUBJECT TO FORFEITURE

The United States submits this memorandum to address legal issues raised at the April 3, 2001 hearing on defendant's emergency petition for return of seized assets. In support, the United States submits:

1. At the hearing, the Court requested legal authorities regarding a) the United States' position that any profits to be derived from the rental use of the vehicles<sup>1</sup> seized in this matter would be forfeitable as proceeds, and b) the Court's authority to take any other action to preserve forfeitable assets during the pendency of the case.

2. As to issue a), paragraph (1) of 21 U.S.C. §853(a) allows the United States to forfeit any real or personal property constituting, or derived from, proceeds obtained by the defendant

<sup>1</sup> As the Court is aware, the vehicles in question were seized pursuant to seizure warrants issued on November 7, 2000, by Magistrate Judge Barry L. Garber, after finding that probable cause existed to believe the vehicles were purchased with proceeds traceable to narcotics. Additionally, the Eleventh Circuit held in United States v. Bissell, 866 F.2d 1343, 1355 (11th Cir. 1989) that probable cause to restrain a defendant's assets under 21 U.S.C. §853 may be based upon the grand jury's return of an indictment against the property (vehicles). Thus, under the law of this Circuit, probable cause has been established.

through the underlying drug violations. The explicit terms of the statute<sup>2</sup> allow for the forfeiture of both direct and derivative property. For purposes of §853, “proceeds contemplates gross proceeds and not merely profits.” See United States v. Keeling, 235 F.3d 533,536(10th Cir. 2000) and United States v. McHan, 101 F.3d 1027,1042(4th Cir. 1996). Additionally, the provisions of §853 are to be liberally construed to effectuate its remedial purpose. See 21 U.S.C. §853(o).

3. The legislative history also specifies that Congress intended to render forfeitable<sup>3</sup> under §853 (a)(1) “the same type of property that was already subject to civil forfeiture under 21 U.S.C. §881(a)(6).” S.Rep.No. 98-225, 98th Cong., 2nd Sess., at 211 (1984), U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News 1984, 3182, at 3394. Section 881(a)(6) authorizes the forfeiture of “all moneys, negotiable instruments, securities, or other things of value furnished or intended to be furnished by any person in exchange for a controlled substance in violation of this subchapter, all proceeds traceable to such an exchange, and all moneys, negotiable instruments, and securities used or intended to be used to facilitate any violation of this subchapter.” The Eleventh Circuit has held that this includes all value-for-value exchanges of proceeds. See United States v. $4,255,000.00, 762 F.2d 895, 905 (11th Cir. 1985)(suggesting that cumulative forfeitures may be permissible under §881(a)(6), cert. denied, 474 U. S. 1056, 106 S.Ct. 795, 88 L.Ed. 2d 772 (1986) . If a drug dealer has a $100 bill, which represents proceeds, and exchanges it with a cohort for five $20 dollar bills,

<sup>2</sup> The language of the RICO statute on forfeiture proceeds at 18 U.S.C. §1963(a)(3), is essentially identical to that in 21 U.S.C. §853(a)(1), and therefore, the interpretations and application of the two provisions should be analogous. See United States v. Campos, 859 F.2d 1233, 1236 n.5 (6th Cir. 1988).

<sup>3</sup> Title 21 U.S.C. § 853(j), Applicability of civil forfeiture provisions provides that: Except to the extent that they are inconsistent with the provisions of this section, the provisions of Section 881(d) of this title shall apply to criminal forfeiture under this section.

then both the $100 bill and the five $20 dollar bills are forfeitable (assuming the transferee is not an innocent owner). Id. See also United States v. Banco Cafetero Panama, 797 F.2d 1154, 1161 n.9 (2nd Cir. 1986)(same).

4. The United States already established probable cause to believe the vehicles<sup>4</sup> were purchased with narcotics proceeds. Consequently, the vehicles seized along with any profits derived therefrom is all forfeitable property like interest earned on a bank account with forfeitable monies. See United States v. $94,000.00 in United States currency along with any interest earned thereon in Financial Savings Association account # 79-70063411, and $40,000.00 in United States currency, along with any interest earned thereon in Lincoln State Bank account #10-002-205-15, 2 f.3d 778 (7th Cir. 1992) (Bank accounts along with the interest earned therein were forfeited) Defendant should not be allowed to make a profit with tainted assets obtained from proceeds.

5. In United States v. Reed, 924 F.2d 1014 (11th Cir. 1991) the United States in a criminal RICO action, was seeking the forfeiture of a business building acquired during the defendant's racketeering activities in 1981 through 1984. The building's value had increased at the time of its sale in 1989. The Court forfeited the building and ruled that all rights, title and interest vested in the government in 1981, before the defendants encumbered it with a mortgage. Consequently, the government was entitled to the increase in value of the building which accrued during that period. Likewise, the United States should be entitled to the profits which defendant seeks to obtain from the proposed rental of the vehicles seized in this matter.

<sup>4</sup> Pursuant to the forfeiture count of the indictment, the United States is seeking forfeiture of the vehicles under three separate legal bases: 1) RICO forfeiture pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §1963; 2) narcotics forfeiture pursuant to 21 U.S.C. §853, and 3) money laundering forfeiture pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §982, for violations of 18 U.S.C. §1956 and 1957. See indictment. D.E. # 3.

6. Additionally, under the money laundering statute, 18 U.S.C. §982(a)(1), the United States can seek forfeiture of any and all property “real or personal, involved in such offense, or any property traceable to such property.” In the case of United States v. Hawkey, 148 F.3d 920, 928 (8th Cir. 1998), the Court ruled that any increase in the value of the property traceable to a money laundering scheme is subject to forfeiture, regardless of whether the increase results from wise investment, personal effort, or the addition of personal untainted funds. In its discussion of the proper application and scope of 18 U.S.C. §982(a)(1), the Court as an example said that if the defendant Hawkey misappropriated $10,000 and purchased stock that appreciated in value to $30,000 at the time of forfeiture, he would be required to forfeit the stock. Id.

The Eleventh Circuit and other courts have consistently held that under the money laundering statute, the United States can forfeit all proceeds regardless of whether they change form. See United States v. Ward, 197 F.3d 1076 (11th Cir. 1999) (“once proceeds become tainted, they cannot become untainted”, funds in a commingled bank account still involve SUA proceeds even though months have passed, and other transactions have occurred, since the SUA proceeds were commingled); United States v. Suba, 132 F.3d 662, 674 n.23(11th Cir. 1998)(transfer of $1.7 million involved SUA proceeds even though defendant had obtained only $1.4 million in fraud proceeds); United States v. Pergler, 1998 WL 887113 (N.D.Ill. 1998)(if defendant secures bank loan with real property purchased with SUA proceeds, then loan proceeds are SUA proceeds, and purchase of car with such proceeds is a section 1957 violation); United States v. Mankarious, 151 F.3d 694 (7th Cir. 1998)(if check constituting proceeds is deposited into bank account, and second check is written on that account, second check constitutes proceeds, even if first check has not yet cleared).

7. As to issue b), under either 18 U.S.C. §1963(d) or 21 U.S.C. §853(e)(1)(A), “the Court may enter a restraining order or injunction, require the execution of a satisfactory performance bond, or take any other action to preserve the availability of property described in subsection (a) of this section for forfeiture under this section". (Emphasis added). This section allows the Court to restrain the defendant from using forfeitable assets prior to trial. The restraints may be imposed by way of a restraining order, an injunction, the execution of a performance bond, or a temporary seizure of certain assets which, because of their liquidity, can be readily transferred or hidden. From this broad grant of authority, the Court can issue a protective order appointing a person to monitor a business and control its operation, as the government did in the case of United States v. Ludwig Fainberg, Case No. 97-054-CR-Ferguson, a/k/a Porky's case. A copy of the protective order entered in Porky's case is attached as Exhibit One.

The Court is empowered to preserve the assets subject to forfeiture by post-indictment restrains on the assets subject to forfeiture. 21 U.S.C. §853(e)(1) specifically provides that:

Upon application of the United States, the Court may enter a restraining order or injunction . . . or take any other action to preserve the availability of property described in subsection (1) of this section for forfeiture under this section—

(A) upon the filing of an indictment or information charging a violation . . . for which forfeiture may be ordered . . . and alleging that the property . . . would, in the event of conviction, be subject to forfeiture under this section;. . .

And the Protective Orders, Restraining Orders, Performance Bonds or Injunctions, for assets that are subject to forfeiture, may be entered without prior notice and opportunity for a hearing. See United States v. Bissel, 866 F.2d 1343 (11th Cir.) cert. denied, 110 S.Ct. 146 (1989); United States v. St.

Pierre, 950 F.Supp. 334 (M.D. Fla. 1996).

According to the Senate Report on the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984, "the probable cause established in the indictment or information is, in itself, to be sufficient basis for the issuance of a restraining order." Senate Report no. 225, 98th Cong., 2d Sess. 203, reprinted in 1983 U.S. Code Cong. And Admin. News, 3182, 3385. See, United States v. Monsanto, 924 F.2d 1186, 1193 (2nd Cir. 1991)(en banc)("because of the exigent circumstances presented, notice and hearing need not occur before an ex parte restraining order is entered pursuant to 853(e)(1)(A)."); see also, United States v. Bissel, 866 F.2d 1352 (pretrial restrain of assets does not violate due process); United States v. Musson, 802 F.2d 384, 387 (10th Cir. 1986)(district Court can rely on the probable cause in a Grand Jury Indictment in issuing a restraining order restricting free alienation of property possibly subject to forfeiture).
